P R E F A C E .

THE Roll of the Corps of Royal Engineers has been chiefly compiled from a MS. List made out by the late Captain Conolly, R.E., and kept up to date by the R.E. Institute from 1857, up to which year Captain Conolly's roll extends.

One of the chief difficulties in compiling such a roll consists of determining at what date it should commence. To quote from the late General Porter's History of the Corps of Royal Engineers:—"In the armies of old every man was more or less an Engineer. He constructed his own roads and bridges, he fortified his own camp, and, further, he prepared and worked his offensive engines of war—catapults, battering rams, and the like. All this he did in addition to the actual fighting which in later times was looked upon as the sole legitimate function of the infantry or cavalry soldier."

Under these circumstances, the date chosen for the commencement of the Roll has been fixed on as the year 1660, in which year King Charles II., on his restoration to the throne, ordered a small fixed establishment of Engineer officers to be maintained; the number at first only amounted to three, which was found wholly inadequate to the wants of the service, and was therefore supplemented by taking additional Engineers into pay for special duties. The names in this Roll consist only of such officers as were actually placed on the Establishment, and consequently a large number of officers who served in many campaigns as Engineers has not been included. Many of these are, however, shown in Appendix I.

The small establishment of three Engineer officers was gradually increased by successive warrants until the year 1716, when the Artillery were made into a separate establishment of two companies, and a regular Corps of Engineers was formed with an establishment of 28 officers; but the old establishment remained still in existence, and were gradually absorbed, the process taking many years to accomplish. Engineer officers at this time had no military rank as officers of the Corps, but most of them held commissions in other regiments.

In 1757 the officers of the Corps received military rank. No warrant can be traced giving effect to this decision, each officer receiving a commission, signed by the King, giving him army rank. These commissions were all dated 14th May, 1757. The Corps has practically remained on the same basis ever since, with occasional changes of establishment.

The lists of officers of the Indian Engineers have presented more difficulty than those on the Imperial establishment. The records in the India Office have not been compiled in such a way as to enable an officer's services to be found out without much searching of old MS. volumes. As this would have entailed delaying the publication of the Roll for several months, it was thought more advisable to proceed with such information as could be obtained from other sources. A good deal of information has been extracted from such books as the East India Register, Thorne's Narrative of the War in India, 1803-6, and others; but in the case of the Bengal and Bombay Engineers, a large amount of the war services that the older officers of these Corps must have gone through is doubtless omitted. The records of the services of officers of the Madras Engineers are probably complete, thanks to the excellent History of that Corps written by Colonel H. M. Vibart, R.E. I may here take the opportunity of expressing my thanks to Colonel Vibart, not only for the information I have been able to obtain from that work and from his book Addiscombe: Its Heroes and Men of Note, but also for much other unpublished information he has kindly given to me.

The first appointment of an Indian Engineer officer appears to have been in the year 1748, when three companies of artillery were raised for service in India, the command of all the three companies being vested in an officer with the title of First Captain and Chief Engineer. Captain Alexander Delavaux (No. 1 on the Madras List) was probably the first to hold this appointment, followed by Benjamin Robins, who was succeeded in 1753 by Lieut.-Colonel C. F. Scott, who had previously been employed in engineering duties in Flanders during the French War. The Madras Engineers date from January, 1759, when a small permanent Corps of four officers (1 Captain, 1 Captain-Lieutenant, 1 Lieutenant and 1 Ensign) was established. The Bengal Corps, according to Broom's Rise of the Bengal Army, dates from 1761, when the establishment consisted of only three officers. I have not been able to fix any date as the exact commencement of the Bombay branch, but it may be taken to have started as a separate Corps in 1768, in which year it was separated from the Artillery.

King William III.'s Company of Engineers was raised in 1696. Nothing is known of the duties of this body; it appears to have been under the direct control of the King, without the intervention of the Board of Ordnance, although some of the officers were on the establishment at the time. The Company was disbanded on the 25th March, 1700.

A small number of Engineer officers were kept on the Irish establishment until the Union in 1801, when they were all retired on full pay, with the exception of Captain G. Armit, who was placed on the Imperial List.

On the formation of the King's German Legion in 1804, the Engineers of the force were attached for duty to the Royal Engineers. They were examined as to their professional acquirements by Professors of the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, and, on being reported in all respects competent, were confirmed in their several ranks.

These officers were entirely under the orders of the Commanding Royal Engineer at the stations to which they were sent. Pay (Regimental and extra), and also Field and other allowances, they received at the same rates as the British Engineers. After serving for a while at the Dover fortifications, etc., their first active service was at Copenhagen in 1807. Subsequently some of them served through the Peninsula War, and a few in Canada, Italy, and wherever the fortune of war took them, equally and in common with officers of the Royal Engineers. The German Legion Engineers were disbanded under the Horse Guards order of 16th December, 1815, but provision was made for each officer to continue on full pay to the 24th of the month after his arrival in Hanover, with a further gratuity of two months' full pay, and then to be placed on half-pay. All were placed on half-pay on the 24th February, 1816, de Gangreben and Luttermann being exceptionally disposed of, the former not having left Canada till March, 1816, and the latter being on service at Genoa to the 31st July, 1816.

The Corps of French Emigrant Engineers was founded on the authority of an Act of Parliament dated 9th May, 1794, and the order for its formation was conveyed in the King's Warrant of 1st April, 1795. It was to consist of 19 officers, none of whom were to receive commissions in the Corps unless they had been in the service of his late "Most Christian Majesty Louis XVI." prior to the revolution. When organized the Corps was at once attached to the Expedition against Quiberon in 1795, and most of those who are marked * in the List were either killed on the Expedition or executed on the re-capture of the place by the French Republicans. On the 23rd August, 1797, two Captain-Lieutenants were reduced, and the whole Corps was disbanded on the 23rd July, 1802, under an order from the Board of Ordnance. A few of the officers were, however, kept on British pay, and one of them, Lieut.-Colonel Preval, served several after campaigns with the British Engineers.

The next list is that of the officers of the Royal Sappers and Miners. This Corps first started as the "Soldier-Artificer Company," which was formed at Gibraltar by Warrant dated 6th March, 1772, and was commanded by officers of the Corps of Engineers, the first commanding officer being Lieut.-Colonel W. Green. This Company served throughout the Siege of Gibraltar, and was afterwards augmented. Its designation was changed by Royal Warrant dated 10th October, 1787, to that of "Corps of Royal Military Artificers," the officers being still supplied from the Corps of Royal Engineers until the year 1806, when the rank of Sub-Lieutenant was created by the Warrant of 1st September, the higher ranks being still filled by R.E. officers. The title was again changed on the 4th August, 1812, to "Royal Military Artificers or Sappers and Miners," and on the 5th March, 1813, to "Royal Sappers and Miners." On the reduction of the army, consequent on the peace after Waterloo, the establishment of the R. S. and M. was considerably decreased, and the rank of Sub-Lieutenant was abolished by the Warrant of the 4th February, 1817. After this the Corps was again entirely officered by the Royal Engineers.

The list of Quartermasters of the Royal Engineers includes only those officers who obtained their commissions from the ranks. On the formation of the Corps of Royal Military Artificers, afterwards the Royal Sappers and Miners, the duties of Quartermaster were carried out by the Captain or other officer of each company till the 1st January, 1789, when Lieutenant G. W. Phipps (No. 211 in the Roll) was given the appointment, which he held until the 31st December, 1806. He was succeeded by Captain J. T. Jones, who held the appointment of "Adjutant and Quartermaster," as did his successor, Captain G. Buchanan. He was followed by another R.E. officer, Captain Rice Jones, up to the 20th December, 1814, when his title was changed to that of Brigade Major. The first officer appointed for the duties of Quartermaster only was J. Galloway on the 1st February, 1814. The remaining officers are shown in List No. 12.

The Coast Battalion, Royal Engineers, commenced its existence on the 13th June, 1885, when four officers were commissioned to it as Lieutenants. Quartermaster and Hon. Captain A. Andrews was appointed to it with the rank of Major on the 1st April, 1886.

The Editor is aware that some inaccuracies and omissions are very likely to occur in the first edition of a work of this description, though he has made every endeavour to render these lists as correct and complete as possible. He hopes that officers of the Corps will kindly communicate with him in cases where they are able to point out such errors, so that, in the event of a second edition being issued at some future date it may be as good a record as can be obtained.
